

College esports leaders often struggle to coordinate team rosters, practice schedules, scrimmages, and events because communication is scattered across Discord, group chats, game clients, and multiple platforms. This lack of central organization leads to confusion, missed practices, and inefficient team coordination. A dedicated tool that unifies scheduling, roster management, and communication would streamline operations and help esports programs function more effectively.